

What's been happening in school this week?

Issue 268

Friday 27 January 2017

The Harry Gosling Herald

At Harry Gosling, we all work together to make sure our children are safe. In school we teach children how to keep themselves safe, and work together and, sometimes, with other organisations to make sure all our children are safe.

Next Friday 3rd February we will be raising money for the national charity, the NSPCC (National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children). Aidan has organised a wonderful Number Day when all children will be able to wear shape-themed clothes or a shape-themed costume to school for a £1 donation. Teachers will be asked to nominate the best costume from their class in assembly. There will be a shape themed 'snack design' competition. Children can bring in a cake/healthy snack with a shape theme and some school councillors will pick the top three at lunch time. The snacks will then be shared out in class at the end of the day. So get cooking!!!

Adults are also invited to an NSPCC workshop at Mulberry and Bigland Green Centre on 8th February from 9:15-12:00. The topic covered will be safeguarding our children from exploitation.

With best wishes, Jennie

WHAT ARE YOU READING THIS WEEK?

Phil in Scarlet Class has been reading

"The Enigma of Capital" by David Harvey. David Harvey is a professor of political geography at Columbia University.

This book explains how 'capital', or money, works. Harvey argues that money only really works because we believe in it, and that, if we wanted to, we could change lots of the rules about how money behaves. It's an interesting, but tricky, book!"
